Letter from the President of Music & Arts

As the leader of a company filled with musicians, and as a musician myself, I understand the importance that music education plays in our lives, and take great responsibility in how we support music education. Our teams have been working very hard to develop new and exciting ways to help music educators, students and musicians everywhere continue learning and stay engaged in music.

In order to help you continue to connect with what you do best, we've collected some of the best resources for distance learning, repair and maintenance, professional development and digital learning opportunities right here in our Music Education Support Center.

We're here to support you. Contact your local Educational Representative for anything you need or additional resources and support we can provide. Keep fighting the good fight, stay safe and well.

Musically,
Jeff Gottlieb
 President, Music & Arts
